ABSTRACT

This document presents a collection of bibliographic and other information relating to the field of comparative higher education. The report is divided into five sections. The first section presents a listing of 12 English language journals judged by respondents to a recent questionnaire to be helpful to comparative higher education. Descriptive information is provided on each journal and a brief content analysis made of its articles and reviews over the last three years in terms of their relevance to comparative higher education. Section 2 offers a listing of additional journal titles that are divided into education and non-education categories. The third section presents a partial listing of abstracts, indexes and bibliographies of value to comparative higher education, and section 4 gives a listing of bulletins, newsletters and newspapers published by various organizations around the world with information of possible interest to comparative higher education. The fifth and final section presents a partial listing of centers and associations of higher education found around the world that might provide further information useful to comparative higher education. Robert O. Berdahl, Chairman of the Department of Higher Education at the State University of New York at Buffalo, is also Acting Director of University Studies for the International Council for Educational Development. Mr. Berdahl, who is North American editor of the new publication Higher Education: An International Journal of Higher Education and Educational Planning, has written extensively on British, Canadian, and American systems of higher education, with emphasis on problems of planning and coordination. His current research is on comparative higher education through a multidisciplinary approach.

George Altomare, Mr. Berdahl's graduate assistant, is a student in Buffalo's doctoral program in higher education. For his dissertation he is designing a taxonomy for the study of comparative higher education.

INTRODUCTION

The following pages present something of a melange of bibliographic and other information relating to the field of comparative higher education. Any attempt to present helpful bibliographic information is beset with two major problems: (1) often the best writing on comparative higher education is done by persons not in education but in the social sciences and is not published in periodicals in the field of education; (2) articles relevant to comparative higher education thus appear in so many different journals that a comprehensive listing would be so extensive as perhaps not to be very useful—so much depends on the particular purposes of the particular researcher.

What is obviously needed in the long run is the development in this field of some equivalent to the function of literature cataloging and abstracting done in economics by the Journal of Economic Literature (complete with an impressive taxonomy). In the absence of such a research help, this report is presented as an interim and relatively blunt source of various types of information. Different readers may find certain parts of the report of more value than others. We would very much welcome critical comments, notification of additional journals, abstracts, bulletins and centers, and general suggestions for improvement.

The report is divided into the following five sections, with mailing addresses related to items in Sections II, III and IV reserved for the Appendixes.

SECTION I: A listing of twelve English-language journals judged by respondents to a recent questionnaire to be helpful to comparative higher education. Descriptive information is provided on each journal and a brief content analysis made of its articles and reviews over the last three years in terms of their relevance to comparative higher education.

SECTION II: A listing of additional journal titles, divided into education and non-education categories.

SECTION III: A partial listing of abstracts, indexes and bibliographies of value to comparative higher education.

SECTION IV: A listing of bulletins, newsletters and newspapers published by various organizations around the world with information of possible interest to comparative higher education.

SECTION V: A partial listing of centers and associations of higher education found around the world which might provide further information useful to comparative higher education. (We anticipate trying to develop fuller information on those centers and associations judged to be most interested in comparative higher education.)

APPENDIXES: A listing of the addresses related to items cited in Sections II, III and IV, cross-referenced by number.

Several other comments are appropriate. First, I am happy to acknowledge the help, encouragement and funding provided by James A. Perkins of the International Council for Educational Development (ICED) and the excellent editorial help from Mary L. Ryan and Christine K. Smith of the same organization. Second, I wish also to acknowledge that the vast bulk of work undertaken for this report was performed by my graduate assistant, George Altomare, who had a free hand in making comments on journals covered in Section I. Third, I would also like to thank Messrs. Philip Altbach, C. Arnold Anderson, Ladislav Cerych, Philip Coombs, Lee Hansen, Clark Kerr, Robert Koehl, Lee Medsker and, in particular, Mrs. Barbara Burn for kind assistance, while absolving them of any responsibility for what is here presented.

Finally, I would note that the International Council for Educational Development is contemplating other actions relating to comparative higher education. For instance, Mr. Ladislav Cerych recently prepared a report for ICED on the Relevance of Comparative Studies in Higher Education for Policy Making. This excellent discussion of the emergence of the field of comparative higher education and its importance to national policy making is to be published by ICED in the near future. I would ask interested parties to consult the periodic ICED Newsletter for further information on this publication and other projects related to the ICED program on comparative higher education.

SECTION I

CONTENT ANALYSIS OF SELECTED ENGLISH-LANGUAGE JOURNALS

CONTENT ANALYSIS OF SELECTED ENGLISH-LANGUAGE JOURNALS

In this section we offer a description and brief content analysis of those English-language journals judged by respondents to a recent questionnaire to be probably most helpful to the field of comparative higher education. Where possible, journal issues over the past three years were examined and their articles and reviews rated according to whether or not they pertained to higher education, and if so, whether they covered only one country (non-comparative) or two or more (comparative).

It was no great surprise to discover that very little work that was genuinely comparative emerged. Indeed, some journals offered nothing but one country studies during this period.

Out of a total of some 1,096 articles surveyed, 574 (52%) were on higher education but of these only 37 (6%) were judged to be comparative. Book reviews fared somewhat better: out of 500 reviews, 243 (48%) fell into the realm of higher education and of these 60 (24%) were on books relating to comparative higher education. Clearly, the journals with the most comparative higher education coverage over the past three years are Minerva, Higher Education, Comparative Education, Comparative Education Review and Western European Education. In the next rung would be Convergence, Daedalus, International Review of Education, Soviet Education and Universities Quarterly. Found to contain no coverage of comparative higher education were Educational Record and Higher Education Review. There may well be comparative coverage in other journals not surveyed (both English and foreign language) but it is clear that the field is not over-researched or over-published. The express purpose of the new journal Higher Education: An International Journal of Higher Education and Educational Planning is to help fill this void.

Analysis was confined to selected English-language journals because of problems of accessibility and translation; however, subsequent versions of this section may include other language journals as well.

FORMAT:

Each issue contains about five articles, book reviews, and occasional notes. The language of publication will be English, but translations can be made if necessary from Dutch, French, German or Russian.

POLICY:

"This international journal of educational studies aims to present up-to-date information on significant educational trends throughout the world, interpreted by scholars in comparative education and related disciplines, but expressed in a straightforward way for the general reader as well as for educationists, teachers, researchers, administrators, and students." Recognizing that "education is the largest single investment—excluding defense—made by governments, . . . Comparative Education sets out to give relevant information, comment, and illustrations of the comparative technique which can be applied to this educational responsibility." The editor invites "contributions from scholars in the field of comparative education and allied disciplines."

COMMENT:

Articles are scholarly and endeavor to cover the entire field of comparative education. A good proportion of the coverage treats higher education.

FORMAT:

A typical number has articles, book reviews, announcements about world conventions, and notes about publications received; often there is an extensive bibliography.

POLICY:

Under the management of the University of Wisconsin, after fifteen years at Columbia University, the journal "will continue to address itself to educational issues, problems, themes, and trends examined through a variety of methods and techniques and approached from the several perspectives which characterize the field in general. No limits upon any kind of inquiry will be imposed, nor will there be a preference for any one single approach or method at the expense of others."

COMMENT:

Articles are well researched. Most issues concentrate on a particular theme. The entire spectrum of education is treated.

FORMAT:

A typical issue contains an ensemble (news), articles, research abstracts, calendar of events and bibliography. Articles are in one of four languages—English, French, Russian and Spanish; abstracts of the articles are in the other three.

POLICY:

In the opening number of the journal in 1968, Editor Kidd stated that Convergence was to be an international journal "in the fullest sense." He wanted "all kinds of learning" to be included under the term "adult education." Thus, the journal in its four years of existence has stressed all kinds of learning, including higher education.

COMMENT:

Articles in this international journal of adult education have been written by top scholars in education from around the world. The stress throughout the four-year span of the journal has been the continuing nature of education. Much information is available in these volumes for the comparative scholar.

FORMAT:

This journal usually contains a preface, articles, notes on contributors, and a list of recent issues of the journals. There are no reviews.

POLICY:

The journal's aim is to promote scholarship in the arts and sciences. "Almost all issues of the journal depend on a series of closed conferences where authors discuss their draft essay with critics." These conferences "follow smaller meetings where the issue is planned." Recent themes of the journal have included higher education topics ("Rights and Responsibilities: The University's Dilemma;" "The Embattled University;" and "The Future of the Black Colleges"). Thus far, the editors of the journal have sponsored two conferences which have been U.S.-oriented with some attention given to Western Europe. They feel, however, "it is not impossible that we will want to include scholars from the East European countries, the Soviet Union, and Japan in a third conference."

COMMENT:

Daedalus covers all areas of learning. About once a year a special number appears on higher education. It is usually crisis-oriented. If, as was mentioned in the POLICY section, the editors arrange the third education conference, more comparative analyses of education may be expected.

POLICY:

With few exceptions, Educational Record focuses upon American education. Articles accepted are scholarly. Most issues are devoted to a theme.

COMMENT:

Educational Record has a good reputation for its articles on U.S. higher education; however, its contribution—past and potential—to comparative higher education is small. It is a valuable source of information for foreign scholars who wish to view American higher education.

The first two numbers contain articles, reports, information about conferences and new associations, reviews, recent books received, and notes to potential authors. Text and summaries are in English with French resumé.

POLICY:

The first number of this journal has a foreword by Clark Kerr who says that "Higher education is on its way to becoming the first truly international community in the modern world." He calls it "more central to the lives of more people in more nations than ever before in history." Coordinating editor Alec M. Ross says that this journal "wishes to provide a medium for the sharing of different countries' experiences in higher education" but adds that this "does not imply that the only approach accepted will be that of the comparative educationist." This journal "is to be a forum where people from different national, academic, and professional backgrounds can meet to discuss all features of higher education."

COMMENT:

This journal intends to provide a forum for scholarly analyses of comparative higher educational topics. However, of the four articles marked comparative, only one directly compared countries. The three in the first issue were only peripherally comparative. In order that this new journal acquire a distinctive tone, efforts must be made to avoid its looking much like the other journals of Elsevier such as Policy Sciences, Technological Forecasting and Social Change. Hopefully this can be accomplished.

POLICY:

The founder of the journal, Frederick Schneider, wanted it to be encompassing and world uniting. International Review of Education covers all areas of education. The bulk of the articles deal with primary and secondary education.

COMMENT:

This journal contains much background information for comparative education scholars. To deal with comparative higher education, one must necessarily be conversant with terms used in comparative primary, secondary, and other forms and levels of education. Many books are reviewed. The articles are comprehensive.

A typical number has four articles, several documents and reports, correspondence, book reviews and notes on contributors.

POLICY:

The journal "aims, through the creation of a forum in which all germane problems will be analyzed openly, critically, and seriously, to enable its readers to appreciate the situations which are common to scientists and scholars everywhere, and to understand their uniqueness as variants of a common condition." Editor Edward Shils, in a January 1972 comment marking the second decade of Minerva, says that, "The coming decade will not see any return of science and higher education to the peaceful, unhurried life which used to be one of the privileges of scholars, scientists, and university teachers. . . . Those who take on themselves the practice of Wissenschaft . . . in its myriad forms must be aware of their multiple and often conflicting obligations. . . . It is to the further clarification of these two distinctive activities (science and learning) and affirmation of their fruitful cooperation that Minerva will be dedicated in the next decade." In his other comments, Shils says that the space allotted to the subjects which Minerva has been considering for the last decade will be roughly the same.

COMMENT:

The rating of articles is subjective; placing broad-scoped articles into slots increases the degree of subjectivity. Thus, another reviewer might not have considered four articles in the January 1971 number which dealt with development as comparative. Minerva may be the main journalistic source of scholarship dealing with comparative higher education. The articles, reports and documents, correspondence, and reviews furnish much information for the comparative higher education scholar.

Soviet Education

P.O. Box 169

Teachers College

Columbia University

New York, New York 10025

FORMAT:

A typical issue contains from two to eleven translations from Soviet publications. There are no book reviews.

POLICY:

"The editors of Soviet Education select material for translations from more than thirty-five Soviet periodicals and newspapers and occasionally from books. The journals are concerned with Soviet preschool, primary, secondary, vocational, and higher education, . . . the Soviet ministries of education and higher education, and the teacher's unions. . . ."

COMMENT:

Each issue has a theme. Sometimes two or three consecutive numbers cover the same topic. An analysis of three years of this journal indicates that its coverage of higher education is sufficient to warrant future perusal of its pages.

Universities Quarterly

PUBLICATION DATA:

Founded—1946

Publisher—Turnstile Press Ltd.

Editor—Professor Boris Ford

Frequency—quarterly

Cost—£2.50 ($6.50) a year

Subscription address—

Editorial address—

Professor Boris Ford

University of Sussex

Falmer, Brighton, Sussex, England

FORMAT:

A typical issue has articles, correspondence, and book reviews.

POLICY:

The first number of Universities Quarterly in 1946 stated this editorial intention: "We hope to publish at least one article on overseas universities in each issue; many of them will certainly deal with the U.S.A." The editors hoped that Universities Quarterly would contribute to "positive direction and vigorous life within the universities" without which large-scale planning would "only plan us into mediocrity." Today there is not always one article on overseas universities. The journal is almost solely oriented toward coverage of British (or Commonwealth) universities.

COMMENT:

This journal is an excellent source of information for those interested in understanding the operations of British universities. The notes often contain valuable information about comparative higher education topics.

Western European Education

Waterside Towers, Apartment 104

907 6th Street, S.W.

Washington, D.C. 20024

FORMAT:

The journal has translations, "Noteworthy Events and Reforms," and "Notes of Interest."

POLICY:

This journal "contains articles selected from leading journals in West European countries. The journal also contains research reports and documents (abridged if necessary) that at times are obtained directly from research centers and school authorities and are not directly available to American educators." While all aspects of the discipline are not covered, special attention is given to experiments and innovation. Each issue focuses on a special topic. Managing Editor Fred Ablin says that more attention will be given by all International Arts and Sciences Press journals to educational innovations such as the Open University. Otherwise, he sees no significant change in the contents of Western European Education.

COMMENT:

This journal's value lies in its obtaining hard-to-obtain reports and in its careful selection of translations. Its comparative higher education content is limited to special issues. It often, however, has significant information for comparative education scholars in its notes.

ADDITIONAL NOTE:

UNESCO AND OECD PROVIDE MUCH INFORMATION THROUGH THEIR PUBLICATIONS ON ALL AREAS OF EDUCATION. Both the Catalogue of Unesco Publications for 1972 and the OECD Catalogue of Publications give lists for documents available as of January 1, 1972 and provide an abundance of data for the comparative higher education scholar.

The Unesco publication includes under its education section the headings of reference, directories, teaching aids, curricula and methods, teaching staff, educational planning, administration, adult and youth education, and periodicals. This publication also lists similar divisions in the areas of science, social and human sciences, documentation, libraries, archives, art and literature, and official publications.

The OECD publication lists the general areas of economic and financial affairs, statistics, development, agriculture, food, and fisheries, energy, industry, transport, and tourism, environment and land-use planning, manpower and social affairs, science and technology, information and education. Indexes of titles, authors and series are presented in each catalogue.

SECTION V

A PARTIAL LISTING OF ACADEMIC UNITS PROVIDING INFORMATION ON HIGHER EDUCATION*

- A. Multinational, International or Regional Units
- B. Single Country Units

* The lists do not include governmental units which perform relevant research in comparative higher education. The authors fully realize that government agencies and documentation centers are major sources of information on education but feel that the listing of one or more government centers would obligate them to include the documentation centers and ministry of education agencies of all the nations of the world.

Therefore these lists only include those units not connected with governments, with the exception of units which receive assistance from a variety of sources, including the government. One example of such an inclusion is the National Foundation for Educational Research in Great Britain.

It is hoped that the elimination of governmental units will not deter the researcher from exploring such agencies whose contributions, in many instances, are substantial.

INTERNATIONAL COUNCIL FOR EDUCATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

The International Council for Educational Development (ICED) is an international non-profit association of persons with a common concern for the future of education and its role in social and economic development.

ICED's three major interests are strategies for educational development; the modernization and management of systems of higher education; and the international programs and responsibilities of higher education. In each area, ICED's purposes are to identify and analyze major educational problems shared by a number of countries, to generate policy recommendations, and to provide consultation, on request, to international and national organizations.

ICED's activities are directed by James A. Perkins, chief executive officer and chairman of an international board. Philip H. Coombs is vice chairman. The headquarters office is in New York City. ICED's European representative, Max Kohnstamm, president of the European Community Institute for University Studies, maintains an office in Brussels.

The main support for ICED to date has come from the Ford Foundation, the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, Unicef, and the Clark Foundation.
